You will hear two friends talking about their plans for a party at the girl's house.

(M = about 16 F = about 16 – Antipodean?)

F: You know we want people to wear special clothes to the party? Well, what about people dressing like clowns?

M: Or wearing different sports clothes? Oh, (slight pause) I know – like animals – that would be really funny!

F:

Awesome!

M:

You look tired. I'm really excited about the party. Are you?

F: I couldn't sleep, thinking and worrying about the party plans. You know, the food, music, games. I don't want people to feel bored.

M:

It'll be great! Now, what about the food? A barbecue perhaps?

F: But it might rain.

M: Yes, that's true. And nobody likes sandwiches. But pizzas are always really popular!

F: You're right. I'll ask mom to order some.

M: Great!

F: Also, the band can't play at the party now.

M: Why? Is your dad thinking about the neighbours and noise?

F: Actually it's Ben, the guitar player. He's got a bad cold.

M: Oh no! And they were happy to play for free! But I've got music. (pause) Anyway, what time's the party going to end?

F: Mom said ten thirty, but I said eleven and she said yes.

M: Good. The last bus is at eleven fifteen. People can catch that.

Pause 10"

You will hear a girl, Jan, leaving a phone message about a penfriend.

F1

Hi, it's Jan.

I've had another email from my penfriend. She knows a girl called Suzi who wants to write to someone here too. Would you like to write to her?

Suzi's living in Japan at the moment because of her Dad's work, but she's from China, actually. My penfriend and Suzi went to school together and they've been friends for eleven years - they're both fourteen, a year older than us.

When Suzi finishes school she's going to go to university and hopes to be a teacher one day, like her mother. Her father's a doctor.

Suzi's learning English at school and she's got a computer so you can email her easily. My penfriend says Suzi loves sport, especially tennis, but she also sometimes plays basketball and football. When she's at home, she enjoys cooking. She eats a lot of rice, but she likes chicken best, just like you!

Come to my house later and we can email them both. Bye.
